

Kylie has over 17 years of Osteopathic Experience, both in teaching and practical skills. She started her career in Sydney and relocated to Melbourne in 2003. Kylie is currently working at RMIT as the Osteopathic Clinical Coordinator.

She uses her teaching skills to educate patient's, to enabling them to make their own choices regarding their healthcare. She tends to have a direct approach, with a focus on producing long term changes, rather than quick fixes. Because of this focus, her consultations are generally up to an hour in length. She uses a wide range of techniques, but generally her focus is on fascia. Kylie works here at Rivers on a Wednesday afternoon.
